THE GODDESS OF ATVATABAR (illustrated)

Like Plato and many Fathers of the Church Aquinas understood the human soul as incorporeal or immaterial and immortal. And dying-to let go, no longer feel the solid ground we stand on every day- is like anxious letting himself fall into the waters, which receives him gently and which, as though with reverence and joy, draw back past him in streams on either side; while, infinitely silent and aware, in his full majesty and ever more indifferent, he condescends to glide.
